

The Masks We Wear exhibition combines household items and dictators

Artwork by Andrea Francolino

Different forms of art make up the whole gallery including paintings, installations, sculpture and mixed media.

Andrea Francolino's quirky artwork combines household items with the faces of dictators and world leaders, which originally inspired the exhibition.

Artists Bongsu Park and Marco Querin use the female form as their starting point.

Park looks at the individual emerging through a process of birth and creation, while Querin uses the subject of the burqa.

Curator and gallery founder Kristin Hjellegjerde says: "Francolino's work is fun yet politically intriguing."

The Masks We Wear; ArtEco Gallery, York Road, Wandsworth; September 6 to October 5, opening times vary; free; artecogallery.com, 020 8875 0110.
